30 Days of Viral Posts

30 post structures built on the patterns that actually stop the scroll — so you stop staring at a blank cursor and start showing up as the authority you already are.

ONI • OPPORTUNITY NETWORK INSIDER

Built for African professionals and founders who want to be seen for what they're worth.

How to use this

These aren't fill-in-the-blank scripts. Each one is a proven shape — the same patterns behind posts that stop the scroll, get read to the end, and get shared. Steal the shape, not the words. Post one a day, or pick whichever fits what actually happened to you that week.

THE ONE RULE BEHIND EVERY VIRAL POST IN THIS GUIDE

Reach without direction is just noise. So every post — whether it's a client win, a personal story, or a hot take — has to close on a LinkedIn visibility or positioning insight. Something about being seen, understood, or trusted for what you're actually worth. That's what turns a viral moment into a body of work.

PILLAR 01

Clarity

Can a stranger tell what you do and who you help within one scroll?

PILLAR 02

Credibility

Are you showing proof, not just claiming expertise?

PILLAR 03

Content

Are you teaching, not just talking about yourself?

PILLAR 04

Connection

Does this post make someone feel understood?

The mix that works: roughly 1 in 4 posts builds authority, more than half teach something useful, and the rest build relationship or invite a conversation. This guide is arranged the same way — Week 1 is Positioning, Weeks 2 and 3 lean Value, Week 4 closes with Relationship and a Call to Action.

Before you post: every hook in here is written as a scene or a moment — not a conclusion. Open on the second before the insight, not the insight itself.

This is Day 1 — The Belief Reversal — actually playing out.

This is a real post from Tumelo's own profile, built on the exact structure on Day 1 of this guide: state the old belief, land the reversal in one line, let it sit. No thread, no hashtags, no growth hack. Just the shape.

01

Positioning & Authority

These templates exist to answer one question in the reader's mind: "why should I trust this person?" — without ever saying "trust me."

DAYS 01 — 08

01

POSITIONING

The Belief Reversal

HOOK

"I used to think [old belief]. Then [specific moment] happened."

STRUCTURE

- Name the belief you held, plainly — no hedging.
- Walk through the moment that cracked it open. One scene, not a summary.
- State what you believe now, in one sharp sentence.
- Name who else might still be holding the old belief.

Close on: what changing your mind publicly does for how people see your judgment — not just your opinion.

Real result: this exact shape earned 13.7K impressions, 393 reactions, 43 comments, and 16 reposts in the wild.

02

POSITIONING

The Quiet Win

HOOK

"No one saw this happen. Here's what it took."

STRUCTURE

- Describe a result — a number, a fix, a save — without naming the client if needed.
- Show the unglamorous work behind it: the follow-up, the detail others missed.
- Skip the humblebrag framing. State it flat.

Close on: how credibility is actually built in the parts of the work nobody applauds.

03

POSITIONING

The Contrarian Take

HOOK

"Everyone tells you to [common advice]. Here's why that's quietly costing you [specific cost]."

STRUCTURE

- State the popular advice fairly — don't strawman it.
- Give the real reason it fails, backed by something you've actually seen.
- Offer what to do instead, in one or two lines.

Close on: why having an opinion — and being willing to defend it — is what makes people remember you.

04

POSITIONING

The Number That Surprised You

HOOK

"[Specific number]. That's the number that made me rethink [X]."

STRUCTURE

- Lead with one real number — revenue, time saved, a percentage, a count.
- Explain what produced it, briefly.
- Say what it changed about how you now approach the work.

Close on: what specificity signals about you — that you measure, not just guess.

05

POSITIONING

The Skill Nobody Taught You

HOOK

"Nobody taught me [skill]. I learned it the expensive way."

STRUCTURE

- Name a real, underrated skill from your work.
- Tell the specific situation that forced you to learn it.
- Give one practical takeaway someone could use this week.

Close on: the skills that quietly separate people at the top of a field from everyone else in it.

06

POSITIONING

The Rejected Idea

HOOK

"They said no to this idea. Eighteen months later, [what happened]."

STRUCTURE

- Describe the idea and who turned it down — no need to name them.
- Explain, honestly, why it got rejected at the time.
- Show what proved it right (or what you learned even though it didn't).

Close on: what it means to trust your own read on a situation before the market agrees with you.

07

POSITIONING

The Standard You Hold

HOOK

"There's one thing I won't compromise on. It's cost me [what it cost]."

STRUCTURE

- Name the standard or principle plainly.
- Tell the specific moment it cost you something — a client, time, money.
- Say why you'd still make the same call today.

Close on: how the standards you hold in private are the thing people are actually buying when they hire you.

08

POSITIONING

The Title vs. The Reality

HOOK

"My title says [title]. My actual Tuesday looks like this."

STRUCTURE

- State your official title or role.
- List 3-4 real things you did this week that the title doesn't capture.
- Land on what you'd actually call the job if you were honest about it.

Close on: why showing the real scope of your work builds a truer kind of authority than the title ever could.

02

Teaching & Value

The bulk of what you post should make someone smarter in under 60 seconds. These are the shapes that turn what you already know into something worth stopping for — and saving.

DAYS 09 — 16

09

VALUE

The 3-Step Breakdown

HOOK

"[Result] took three moves. Here's exactly what they were."

STRUCTURE

- State the outcome up front.
- Break it into exactly three steps — no more. Each one, one line.
- Flag the step most people skip.

Close on: why simple, repeatable steps are what actually get saved and shared — not the complicated version.

10

VALUE

The Mistake I See Everywhere

HOOK

"I've seen this exact mistake [X] times this month alone."

STRUCTURE

- Describe the mistake specifically — not vaguely.
- Explain the real cost of it, with a number or outcome if you have one.
- Give the fix in one or two sentences.

Close on: what noticing patterns other people miss says about how closely you watch this space.

11

VALUE

The Before / After

HOOK

"Before: [state]. After: [state]. Here's what happened in between."

STRUCTURE

- Paint the "before" in one vivid line.
- Paint the "after" in one vivid line.
- Fill the middle with the two or three moves that bridged them.

Close on: how visible transformation is more convincing than any pitch you could write.

12

VALUE

The One Question

HOOK

"One question changed how I approach [X] completely."

STRUCTURE

- State the question, exactly as it was asked or as you now ask it.
- Explain what it forces you to confront.
- Invite readers to ask it of their own work.

Close on: why the right question is worth more than most answers — and why you're the one asking it.

13

VALUE

The Working Checklist

HOOK

"Before I [do the thing], I run through this list."

STRUCTURE

- Name the moment this checklist gets used.
- List 4-6 real items, short and specific.
- Mention the one item that's saved you the most times.

Close on: how a real, used checklist is proof of process — and process is what clients are actually paying for.

14

VALUE

The Myth-Buster

HOOK

"[Common belief] isn't true. Here's what's actually happening."

STRUCTURE

- State the myth in the way people actually repeat it.
- Explain the reality, with one concrete example.
- Say what to do differently, now that the myth's cleared up.

Close on: why correcting a widely-held myth, calmly and with evidence, is one of the fastest ways to be seen as the expert in the room.

15

VALUE

What I Wish I Knew

HOOK

"What I wish someone had told me before I started [X]."

STRUCTURE

- Set the scene: where you were when you started.
- List 3-4 things you know now, each in one line.
- Pick one to expand on slightly — the one that mattered most.

Close on: how sharing hard-won lessons openly builds more trust than presenting yourself as someone who's never struggled.

16

VALUE

The Redefinition

HOOK

"Everyone defines [term] wrong. Here's what it actually means."

STRUCTURE

- Give the common (often shallow) definition people use.
- Offer your own, sharper definition — grounded in real work.
- Show the practical difference the redefinition makes.

Close on: how owning the definition of a term in your space is one of the quietest ways to own the space itself.

03

More Value, Deeper Cuts

Where Week 2 taught quick wins, these go one layer deeper — comparisons, walkthroughs, and answers to the questions people are actually asking you in DMs.

DAYS 17 — 24

17

VALUE

The Head-to-Head Comparison

HOOK

"[Option A] or [Option B]? People ask me this every week. Here's my honest take."

STRUCTURE

- Name both options fairly.
- Give one real strength and one real limit of each.
- Say which you'd choose, and for whom, without hedging into neutrality.

Close on: why having a clear, defensible opinion earns more trust than staying diplomatically vague.

18

VALUE

The Walkthrough

HOOK

"Here's exactly how I [did the thing], start to finish."

STRUCTURE

- Name the outcome first, so people know what they're walking toward.
- Number the real steps — 5 to 7 is plenty.
- Flag the one step that trips most people up.

Close on: what showing your actual process — not just your results — does for how deeply people trust your expertise.

19

VALUE

The Objection, Answered

HOOK

"[Common objection]' — I hear this a lot. Here's my honest answer."

STRUCTURE

- State the objection exactly as people voice it — don't soften it.
- Give a genuinely honest answer, including where the objection has a point.
- Close with what you'd tell someone still on the fence.

Close on: how answering hard questions in public, instead of only in sales calls, is what makes people trust you before they've even spoken to you.

20

VALUE

The Data Point, Explained

HOOK

"[Stat or data point]. Most people misread this. Here's what it actually means."

STRUCTURE

- Lead with the number or stat, cited if it's not your own.
- Explain the common (wrong) interpretation.
- Give your read, and what it means for the reader's decisions.

Close on: why being the person who interprets the noise, not just repeats it, is what makes people come back to your page.

21

VALUE

The Framework Reveal

HOOK

"I built a simple framework for [problem]. Here it is, in full."

STRUCTURE

- Name the framework — give it a real, memorable name.
- Break it into its parts (3-5 is ideal), one line each.
- Show it applied to one real example.

Close on: how naming your own way of thinking is one of the strongest signals of authority there is.

22

VALUE

The Public Answer

HOOK

"A client asked me this last week. Figured it's worth answering here too."

STRUCTURE

- Paraphrase the real question, keeping it specific.
- Answer it exactly as you would in the actual conversation.
- Invite others with the same question to reach out.

Close on: how answering one real question in public quietly answers it for everyone too polite to ask.

23

VALUE

The Shift Alert

HOOK

"Something is changing in [industry/space]. Most people haven't noticed yet."

STRUCTURE

- Describe the shift plainly — what's different now versus a year ago.
- Give the evidence: something you've seen, not just heard.
- Say what you'd tell someone to do differently because of it.

Close on: why being early to name a shift is worth more, positioning-wise, than being right about it eventually.

24

VALUE

The Resource Roundup

HOOK

"These are the [tools/resources] I actually use for [X] — not the usual list."

STRUCTURE

- List 3-5 resources you genuinely use, with one honest line on each.
- Flag the one that surprised you most.
- Skip anything you haven't personally used.

Close on: how curation — telling people what's actually worth their time — is its own form of authority.

04

Relationship & Call to Action

The final stretch. These posts exist to make people feel something, and to give the ones who are ready an obvious, low-pressure way to reach out.

DAYS 25 — 30

25

RELATIONSHIP

The Team Spotlight

HOOK

"[Name] did something this week that deserves to be said out loud."

STRUCTURE

- Describe the specific moment or contribution — not a generic compliment.
- Say what it made possible for the wider team or the client.
- Tag them, with their permission.

Close on: what it says about the kind of leader or founder you are, that you make space to name other people's work.

26

RELATIONSHIP

The Gratitude Post

HOOK

"I don't say this enough, but [specific thing] mattered more than I let on."

STRUCTURE

- Name the person, moment, or milestone specifically.
- Say exactly why it mattered — avoid generic thank-yous.
- Keep it short. Gratitude posts lose power when they run long.

Close on: how genuine, specific gratitude makes you more memorable than another polished insight post ever could.

27

RELATIONSHIP

The Day-in-the-Life

HOOK

"6:47am. My day actually starts here, not on the calendar."

STRUCTURE

- Pick 4-5 real, specific moments from an actual day — with times if it helps.
- Include one moment that doesn't look glamorous.
- End on the moment that made the day worth it.

Close on: how letting people see the real texture of your work builds a kind of trust no polished highlight reel can.

28

RELATIONSHIP

The Borrowed Lesson

HOOK

"[Person]'s comment stuck with me. I've thought about it every day since."

STRUCTURE

- Set up who said it and the context, briefly.
- Share what they said, in your own words.
- Say how it's changed something concrete about how you work.

Close on: how giving credit publicly for a lesson you didn't invent still reflects well on your own judgment and humility.

29

CTA

The Debate Starter

HOOK

"Unpopular opinion: [specific, defensible stance]. Change my mind."

STRUCTURE

- State a real opinion — one you'd actually defend in the comments.
- Give one or two lines of reasoning, not a full essay.
- Genuinely invite disagreement — and plan to reply to it.

Close on: how showing up in your own comments, engaging with pushback, does more for your visibility than the post itself.

30

CTA

The "Type Ready" Offer

HOOK

"I'm opening up [X spots/offer] this month. If that's you, keep reading."

STRUCTURE

- Lead with real value or context — don't open on the pitch.
- State plainly what you're offering and who it's for.
- Give one clear, low-pressure action: "Type READY and I'll send you the details."

Close on: how a specific, honest offer — made after 29 days of showing your work — reads as an invitation, not a pitch.

YOU MADE IT TO DAY 30

One viral post won't build authority. Consistency does.

Thirty shapes won't do the work for you — but they'll get you unstuck on the days the words won't come, and give you a real shot at the scroll-stopping post when it counts. Post the ones that fit what actually happened to you this week. Skip the ones that don't feel true yet.

If you want a clearer read on where your own LinkedIn presence stands right now — what's working, what's costing you credibility, and where to focus next — that's exactly what the ONI Authority Audit is built for.
